Two Sides To The Moon

There are two schools of thought among experts, it seems, on this question of how soon man can make a serious start at conquering space. The more optimistic school-which is very conservative indeed compared to the comic books-thinks that by spending $4,000,000,000 it will be possible to have a space satellite circling the earth in 10 years.

This satellite in due course could serve as filling station and take-off point for trips to the moon. From the moon, after acquiring more experience and knowledge, there might be flights to Mars and Venus. This school, headed by former Nazi N-2 expert Wehrner von Braun, impatiently rejects any suggestion that the sky's the limit.

But Dr. Milton Rosen, head of the Navy's Viking project, feels that it may be a long, long time before man gets anywhere near the moon. There are too many factors which are known that can go wrong, and more that are not known. The margin of safety is too small. Until science makes new discoveries to ease some of the difficulties, Rosen is convinced that the kind of projects Von Braun has outlined in some detail will amount to sheer suicide for the first rocket Rocket motors are tricky things. To make 51 of them work together, as Von Braun proposes, would mean overcoming very long odds. If a single one failed, the whole rocket would fail. Parachutes would be useless.

Human bodies, reasonably hardy under earthbound conditions, would be a still bigger problem in space. Nothing like a practicable space suit for the all-but-absolute vacuum beyond the earth's atmosphere has been devised, Rosen believes. The best thing now possible, in his opinion, is some kind of rigid enclosure equipped with remote control devices.

The human body in space, would be the target of deadly radiations, of unearthly heat and unearthly cold. It would have to learn to function without atmospheric pressure and without gravity. The tiniest leak or blowhole would admit inexorable death.

There are two sides to the moon—one hot enough to vaporize water, the other cold enough to liquify atmospheric gases. There are also two sides to the question of how and when man will get there.

Misleading "Casualties"

The word "casualties" is so commonly misunderstood that conclusions based on it may be misleading. The Pentagon, at any rate, has come to this conclusion. A Defense Department announcement says the word will no longer be used, and lists of killed, wounded and missing will no longer be lumped together. While this falls short of being an ideal solution, it may be a step in the right direction.

There is a "widespread and popularly accepted impression," says the Pentagon announcement, "that 'casualty' means 'fatality.'" Actually, 74 per cent of all U. S. casualties so far listed in the Korean fighting have been wounded, not killed. And 85 per cent of these-or nearly 63 per cent of all American casualties so far listed-recover sufficiently to return to some form of duty.

Another 10 per cent of those on the casualty lists are in the "missing" category. Many of these have been taken prisoner; a few may have deserted or gone AWOL; some are dead whose bodies have not been recovered. Latest casualty figures, which total 127,383. include 20,004 known killed.

A fact even less widely understood is that when the Pentagon speaks of 127,383 "casualties," this does not mean that 127,383 separate persons have been wounded, killed or reported missing since the Korean War started. If one GI received three minor battle injuries, from which he has completely recovered, he is still listed as three casualties.

But the change in casualty listings announced hardly seems adequate to end the confusion. Perhaps the Pentagon might try preparing an entirely new kind of listing, to show the number of men in the armed forces actually unable to return to duty because of death, disappearance or injury.

King Borealis

King Borealis is getting ready for Christmas, and man's modern contrivances are taking it on the chin. Reindeer would never be stuck in a snowdrift, no matter how deep. But snowstorms have stranded trains, tied up airplanes and otherwise played hob with transportation and living along the Pacific Coast. No doubt before Santa makes his annual migration, similar inconveniences will be suffered farther eastward.

But King Borealis refuses to be diverted from his task, which is to prepare the terrain for Santa's reindeer. How could those doughty animals make their way southward from the North Pole if snowfall did not precede their course at least part of the way?

Yep, Christmas is so close things are really humming. Stores are jampacked with customers and expect a gradual increase in the pressure until the very walls threaten to give way. They have all but abandoned the advice of old to "do your shopping early." They know somebody will do it, and their shelves will be decimated before Christmas Eve.

At the post office, too, the velocity of Christmas activity is gaining momentum. Preparations have been made to handle many times the normal volume of mail, but that is no reason to expect the impossible in the last few hectic days before Christmas. Mail it now is as good a motto as any that has been suggested for the Yuletide.

Keeping To The Land

How, by beneficent rather than coercive means, to stem the tide of migration of young men from the country to the cities is a problem engrossing the government of Ireland, whose predominant industry is agriculture. Higher wages in the cities have lured 50,000 agricultural workers in the last five years, and it has come to be realized that this exodus could assume truly alarming proportions.

Elder sons, working for "pocket money" because aged farmers will not surrender the land, find themselves unable to marry, and the girls who should be their wives flock to factories and urban amusements.

Perhaps with Scotland in mind, to which soldiers back from the war refused to return because so many Scottish girls were employed in English factories. Prime Minister De Valera and his planners are giving high consideration to decentralizing industries. If such efforts were crowned with success, they would be no less than a second industrial revolution for Ireland. and go a long way toward keeping its economy on an even keel.

Christmas Toys

We ought to give some thought to the selection of Christmas toys and buy only those that are safe and in keeping with the age of the youngster. Many of us are carried away by the Christmas spirit and favor presents with adult appeal. We think children will enjoy them but actually we like these toys ourselves. But it happens every year and accounts for father's disappointment when junior casts aside his new electric train for the old worn out blocks Grandma found in the attic last year.

Children are individuals and never hesitate to call a spade a spade. For them a toy is something to play with and cost never enters the picture. If a measuring cup or tin plate offers more amusement than an expensive gadget the latter will be ignored. This is the way it should be because toys ought to stimulate the imagination and encourage skill and resourcefulness. Furthermore, there is not much we adults can do when Johnny uses his blocks as a noisemaker rather than as a means of building a house or bridge. Toys can be educational as well as stimulating. Some help to develop strength and skill; others encourage constructive and creative play. A few aid social and artistic development, at the same time stimulating knowledge.

Infants are fascinated by the noise and movement of rattles and soft, fluffy balls hung by a cord above the crib so that they can be reached. The 3 to 7 month old baby enjoys wooden beads, empty spools, inflated animals, rattles, and even a piece of cord. Toys that are breakable and have sharp edges must be avoided. Because tots put everything into the mouth, toys ought to be too large to swal-

Because most paints are safe nowadays there is no need to be concerned along this line. The rubber ball usually enters the picture at 9 months and water toys also are amusing. The toddler loves the push and pull gadgets, kiddie cars, hobby horses, blocks, and boxes that open and shut. A sandbox with spoon, shovel, sieve, and pail will be a good invest-

Sex preferences appear about age 2, when boys cast aside dolls and become more mechanically inclined and girls begin to mimic mama. The pre-schooler loves wagons, wheelbarrows, sleds, tricycles, trapeze sets, sewing cards, and clothespins. The older child gradually makes better use of building blocks, tinker toys, modeling clay, model airplanes, embroidery sets, jigsaw puzzles, and carpenter tools. Requests begin to pour in starting at age 9 to replace the tricycle with a bicycle and for catcher's mitts, base balls, bats, footballs, roller skates, and croquet sets.

Christmas is an exciting time of the year for most of us, more so for the little ones. It is a lucky household that comes through the ordeal without a cranky or sick child. This situation can be offset by maintaining a calm attitude throughout the entire Yuletide and by insisting upon as much rest and sleep as possible. It is well to remember that the small fry will not eat an adequate dinner if they are allowed to consume as much candy and nuts as they want.

See that the boy learns to dive properly; otherwise the Eustachian tubes, middle ears, and the sinuses may be effected. If the dive is improperly executed, the air content of these cavities will be forced out and water may rush in. This often leads to irritation, which may encourage inflammation. The swimmer should not blow the nose or swallow immediately after the dive or after doing handstands under water; this too may force water into the ears.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Pan American Airways Opposed Chartered Planes For GI Christmas Trips Home; Stevenson Now Admits He Never Could Have Beaten Ike

WASHINGTON-This column receives a great many letters from GI's and gobs in Korea and other areas asking for advice and help regarding various inequities. Many of these get to the root of enlisted men's problems and even affect the general public.

Because of widespread interest, here are the most recent excerpts from the GI mail bag:

Cablegram from 55 members of 322nd Signal Battalion, Darmstadt, Germany - "Pan American Airways forced cancellation of a contract between 55 GIs and Sabena Airlines for a chartered plane to take us home for Christmas. Pan American withheld action until after we had waived our right to government transportation for the month of December, leaving the alternative of paying full prices for commercial transportation or remaining overseas for the second successive Christmas. When we protested, the Panam representative called us 'emotional kids.' We are 55 'emotional kids' who still appreciate spending Christmas with our families.

Answer - Investigation by this column finds that the 55 GIs' cable not only is accurate, but that Pan American Airways also brought pressure on the British, French, rules, and asked them to pick Dutch, as well as Sabena (Belgian) airlines to cancel 30 other chartered Christmas flights.

Panam warned these airlines that under an International Transport Association regulation they could be fined $50,000. This regulation is actually intended to stop cut-rate competition. Nevertheless, Panam threatened to invoke it to stop the GI Christmas flights. As a result, the other airlines got cold feet and left the GIs stranded in Europe. As far as this column could learn, only one chartered plane ignored the warning and went ahead with its flight.

Apparently, Pan American hoped to force the GIs to fly home on its planes at regular commercial rates. This would amount to from $100 to $250 extra for each GI, depending on how many had got together for a chartered flight.

Though all available military transportation is already booked up for December, the Air Force has promised this column to have "special Mission" planes sent to Europe during December pick up these stranded GIs on the way The Air Force has also contacted several unscheduled airlines, which do not come under ITA up the canceled charters. This column is happy to report that most of the stranded GIs will be home for Christmas-in spite of Pan American Airways.

Three enlisted men aboard the U. S. S. Duxbury Bay - "There are 215 white hats (enlisted men) aboard this ship. We have four shower stalls, but only three operate, and they are turned on just one hour per day. Most of the time we have only two washbowls to wash up. Yet 215 men are given only 15 minutes to clean up in the morning. If we don't turn to on time, we have to work two hours for every five minutes we are tender U. S. S. Duxbury Bay last left port, she was supposed to have 18 washbasins and nine showers for 215 enlisted men, as compared with 10 washbasins and six showers for 16 officers. Even if all these facilities are working, this still leaves 12 enlisted men to a washbowl and 26 to a shower, as compared to less than two officers to a washbowl and three to a shower. It looks as if the officers could move over a bit and give the "white hats" more elbow room around the washbowls.

A Service Mother, Denver, Colorado - "My son has served two years with the Marines, 11 months of this in Korea. He was slightly wounded by shrapnel on Heartbreak Ridge. He has less than a year before his enlistment is up. But he has been shipped to Camp Pendleton, California, for assignment back to Korea. Isn't there a regulation against this?" Answer - Enlisted men under the rank of sergeant are not supposed to be shipped to Korea if they have less than eight months left to serve. Those who haven't even been sent to an embarkation point are supposed to have over a year left before they can be ship-However, both the Army ped out. and the Marines have been ignoring the regulation and shipping men to Korea despite it. Now that you know the regulation, you can raise the issue with the proper authorities.

These Days

A Question

Men do not get jobs in high places without being recommended. Someone opens the door for them. In the case of Americans employed by the United Nations, someone got the jobs for them; someone screened them from the standpoint of security. The reason that Adrian S. Fisher, legal adviser to the State Department, has been called before the federal grand jury in New York and the McCarran Committee is because it was assumed that he, as the law officer of the State Department, could tell how this is done. Also called were John D. Hickerson, assistant secretary of State for UN Affairs, and Carlisle H. Humelsine, deputy under secretary for administration.

The United Nations employs a large staff of all types of administrators, heads of departments, down to janitors and caretakers. Some of these persons come in by examination on a kind of civil service. Others are hired because of their reputations and known skills. They represent many nations and speak of themselves as international officials. There seems to be a quota system, so many allotted to each country to prevent any one country from having a monopoly. All countries, except the United States, can control their own personnel in the United Nations by simple passport arrangements. In a word, if they do not want a man or woman to be employed by the United Nations, no passport is granted. On the other hand, because the United Nations is situated in New York, no American needs a passport to go to the United Nations. Therefore, this device is available to every member state of the United Nations except the United States.

All Russians, Poles, Ukrainians, and others of the satellite groups who are employed in the United Nations are directly appointed by their own delegations. A few oldtime anti-Communist Czechs remain and that is often used as an exhibit of freedom from control. The State Department, however, maintains that it does not appoint Americans; in fact, it insists that it keeps its hands off such matters. How does it happen that so many in the bigger jobs have formerly been employed in one department or other of the Government of the United States, and some of them, by the State Department? How does it happen that many who were fired from our government as security risks, them? Further, it has been stated to those seeking to discover the facts that if the United Nations requires security information from any government, it is possible to get the facts officially in a very short time, perhaps within a fortnight. The return of requested data from the State Department is always delayed. Why the delay? Who is responsible for the delay?

Even now, after Trygve Lie has dismissed 18 Americans who have demonstrated that they are security risks, the State Department remains nonco-operative with the McCar, ran Committee which has not been witch-hunting in any respect, but has caught the subversive devils red-handed, some of them fearing to testify as to whether they have engaged in espionage lest they incriminate themselves.

The McCarran Committe will continue its investigation after General Eisenhower has become President of the United States. Senator William Langer, who will head the Judiciary Committee, has already announced that this will be the policy of his committee. Senator Homer Ferguson will be in charge of the sub-committee investigating subversion.

Senator Ferguson, having a logical mind, is bound to ask the questions herein outlined. Otherwise, the investigation makes no sense. True, there is some excitement in discovering Americans in the United Nations who will not speak about espionage without fearing that they will incriminate themselves. But that is not enough.

From the standpoint of a legislative committee, what is important is not to "get" anybody, but rather to find the process by which the security of the country is imperilled and to pass legislation plugging up the holes. The attitude of the State Department has thus far been to run interference for the subversives. This question may roll over into Senator Wiley's Committee on Foreign Relations, which supervises the State Department, and Senator McCarthy's Committee on Executive Expenditures.

With these committees co-operating to get at the process, the State Department will ultimately be forced to disclose the truth, no matter who is involved and how long it takes.

Money And Politics WASHINGTON.

Leading Democrats, recovering a little from the heavy blow which they suffered on Nov. 4, are beginning to ask themselves whether this blow was not really a blessing in disguise. One way to understand what they have in mind is to consider the budget message which

Harry S. Truman, in his last important act as President, will shortly submit to Congress. This Truman budget message will leave a sort of ghostly Truman imprint on the Eisenhower regime, since the budget and the policy of any administration are two sides of the same coin. And astute Democrats are rather slyly aware that this Truman budget will be no political asset to the Eisenhower administration.

According to reliable report, Truman will ask much less for defense appropriations than is generally anticipated. For purposes of comparison, Truman in his last budget message asked Congress to appropriate a total of $86 billion, of which about $57 billion was for American defense and mutual aid. Congress a ctually appropriated about $52 billion for these purposes. Truman and Budget Director Frederick Lawton are now busily paring to the bone the com-

get message. Not Good News

There may be last minute changes, but reliable indications are that Truman will ask Congress to appropriate only about $45 billion or so for defense and mutual aid. Other cutbacks are planned elsewhere, even including the Atomic Energy Commission. In short, Truman will ask a whopping $12 billion or so less than he asked last year, and $7 billion less than Con-

At first glance, this may look like good news for the Eisenhower administration. In fact, it is nothing of the sort. As far as appropriations are concerned, even the most ecenomy-minded members of Congress will hardly be able to point to the Truman budget message as evidence of wild extravagance. But the most economyminded members of Congress are by no means necessarily the best judges of the wisest level of defense expenditures.

This matter of the wisdom of the vice president and manager of

onel by Secretary of War Newton

is enough to say that President Eisenhower, after a good hard look at some of the skeletons-left in President Truman's closet, may very well decide to ask for higher defense appropriations than those requested in Truman's budget message. And the spectacle of a Republican President asking Congress for more money than a Democratic President would not be displeasing to Democrats. Even if the appropriations requested in the Truman budget message are not increased, the Eisenhower administration will not enjoy the political benefits supposedly inherent in reduced government spending. Indeed, the reverse will be true. For there is, of course, a vital difference between money appropriated by Congress and money actually spent by the government in any one fiscal year.

Comes At Bad Time

This is an esoteric subject. But the heart of the matter is that money appropriated by Congress is largely spent in future years, while current spending is in turn determined by past appropriations. Inflationary pressures are highest when the government is spending more than it is currently getting in taxes. This is therefore the worst possible time to reduce taxes. And Eisenhower is becoming parable figure for this year's bud-President just as current government expenditures, as distinct from appropriations, are reaching a post-war peak. Current expenditures envisaged in the Truman budget should easily top $80 billion.

Sen. Robert A. Taft has called for an immediate cutback in government spending to $70 billion. But budget experts are unanimously convinced that current spending could be so heavily reduced in just one way-by canceling many existing defense contracts and heavily reducing the existing force levels of the services. It is scarcely conceivable that Eisenhower. after his look at the skeleton in the Truman closet, will be willing to take the appalling risk inherent in such a course.

If Truman's requested appropriations are not increased, the time will come, of course, when reduced current spending will permit reduced taxes. But this will be, from a political standpoint, exactly the wrong time. Heavy cutbacks in current defense spending are envisaged for early 1954. These cutbacks will almost certainly cause considerable unemployment - and this on the eve of the 1954 election. It is thus easy to see why one astute Democrat remarked recently, "If the Republicans had to win, they couldn't have chosen a better time." Yet it should also be said that the kind of leadership which Eisenhower now has an opportunity to offer the nation could very well knock all such sly. money-minded calculations into .

Birth Rates

BABSON PARK, Mass - Once in awhile it is well to consider the past. There is an old-time saying - even if unconfirmed -"History is always repeating itself about every 20 years." Let us look back at the stock market "lows" and "birth rates" of 20 years ago. The only logical reason for the above old saying is that people "mature" at about 20 years of age. Even this reasoning should not be taken serious if the same number of people become 20 years of age every year! For this old theory to work, there must be a differential in the maturity rate. We then can apply this theory as one factor determining stock market move-

Look At The Record

Although a certain percentage of babies and young people die before 20 years of age, it is fair to assume that the ratios apply to all who reach'the age of 20 during these years. The following table gives an approximate idea of what has happened:

Births 1932-1951

1932		2,074	,042;	1933		2,081,23
			,636;		-	2,155,10
1936	-	2,144	1,790;	1937	-	2,203,33
1938		2,286	5,962;			2,265,58
1940	-	2,360	0,399;	1941		2,513,4
			8,996;		-	2,934,8
			4,800;			2,735,4
1946	-	3,28	8,672;	1947	-	3,699,9
			5.068:	1949	-	3,581,0

As there were fewer born in the early thirties-there will now be fewer marriages and, hence, fewer births.

1950 - 3,451,608; 1951 - 3,648,954.

The above figures suggest that an abnormally small number are now reaching 20 years of age. Hence, according to this theory. there should be a decline in business, wages, prices, real estate, etc. around 1953. Of course, births are only one factor; but they should have a bearing on stock and bond prices, notwithstanding the recent Republican victories.

Opportunities For Merchants The above figures also indicate possible optimistic relationship of the birth rates to certain businesses. For instance, sometimes they are bound to cause an increased demand for everything from diapers to toys; while at other times they help real estate and furniture sales. It is important that manufacturers and merchants, as well as parents, should keep this in mind. This increase in business will first appear as the birth wave develops needs for new babies; then in needs for the young children; then the demands for the teenagers; then in needs for the older youths; and finally the needs of adults.

Statistics show that there has been a great increase in older people, due to various causes. Social Security is reducing worry amongst the aged and certainly they all should thank Francis Townsend of California for this. The new drugs, vitamins, etc. have done much to eliminate disease and lengthen life. What penicillin has done to save the lives of pneumonia patients is a story in itself. Finally, the shorter day and the five-day week have protected the older members of our families. Every manufacturer and shopkeeper is getting more business from older people today than ever before.

Outlook For Colleges

Just now, most colleges are operating at a deficit from temporary lack of students, due to the great drop in the birth rate which came 18 to 20 years ago. These colleges, however, should take heart because the crest of another wave of high birth rates will begin to benefit them a few years hence. Not only will more men and women demand an education, but better economic conditions will give more families the money to provide such. In connection with birth rates, we must not forget the returning GI's from Korea. These will be given the same rights to a free college education as were provided to the veterans of World War II. In view of the election of General Eisenhower as our new President, veterans will receive other advantages and compensations, from which many manufacturers and merchants should benefit. Hence, we should watch birth rate figures for both pessimistic and optimistic signals.

White House sessions last week, Governor Stevenson remarked that last July he was convinced no Democrat could beat Eisenhower. "But during the campaign," Stevenson added, "I fooled myself and thought I had a real chance to win. As I look back on it, I now realize that I was right last July - nobody could have beaten Eisenhower

Two Sides To The Moon

There are two schools of thought among experts, it seems, on this question of how soon man can make a serious start at conquering space. The more optimistic school-which is very conservative indeed compared to the comic books-thinks that by spending $4,000,000,000 it will be possible to have a space satellite circling the earth in 10 years.

This satellite in due course could serve as filling station and take-off point for trips to the moon. From the moon, after acquiring more experience and knowledge, there might be flights to Mars and Venus. This school, headed by former Nazi N-2 expert Wehrner von Braun, impatiently rejects any suggestion that the sky's the limit.

But Dr. Milton Rosen, head of the 'Navy's Viking project, feels that it may be a long, long time before man gets anywhere near the moon. There are too many factors which are known that can go wrong, and more that are not known. The margin of safety is too small. Until science makes new discoveries to ease some of the difficulties, Rosen is convinced that the kind of projects Von Braun has outlined in some detail will amount to sheer suicide for the first rocket Rocket motors are tricky things. To make 51 of them work together, as Von Braun proposes, would mean overcoming very long odds. If a single one failed, the whole rocket would fail. Parachutes would be useless.

Human bodies, reasonably hardy under earthbound conditions, would be a still bigger problem in space. Nothing like a practicable space suit for the all-but-absolute vacuum beyond the earth's atmosphere has been devised, Rosen believes. The best thing now possible, in his opinion, is some kind of rigid enclosure equipped with remote control devices.

The human body in space, would be the target of deadly radiations, of unearthly heat and unearthly cold. It would have to learn to function without atmospheric pressure and without gravity. The tiniest leak or blowhole would admit inexorable death.

There are two sides to the moon-one hot enough to vaporize water, the other cold enough to liquify atmospheric gases. There are also two sides to the question of how and when man will get there.

Misleading "Casualties"

The word "casualties" is so commonly misunderstood that conclusions based on it may be misleading. The Pentagon, at any rate, has come to this conclusion. A Defense Department announcement says the word will no longer be used, and lists of killed, wounded and missing will no longer be lumped together. While this falls short of being an ideal solution, it may be a step in the right direction.

There is a "widespread and popularly accepted impression," says the Pentagon and 'casualty' means 'fatality.'" Actually, 74 per cent of all U.S. casualties so far listed in the Korean fighting have been wounded, not killed. And 85 per cent of these-or nearly 63 per cent of all American casualties so far listed-recover sufficiently to return to some Another 10 per cent of those on the casualty lists are in the "missing" category. Many of these have been taken prisoner; a few may have deserted or gone AWOL; some are dead whose bodies have not been recovered. Latest casualty figures, which total 127,383. include 20,004 known killed.

A fact even less widely understood is that when the Pentagon speaks of 127,383 "casualties," this does not mean that 127,383 separate persons have been wounded, killed or reported missing since the Korean War started. If one GI received three minor battle injuries, from which he has completely recovered, he is still listed as three casualties.

But the change in casualty listings announced hardly seems adequate to end the confusion. Perhaps the Pentagon might try preparing an entirely new kind of listing, to show the number of men in the armed forces actually unable to return to duty because of death, disappearance or injury.

King Borealis

King Borealis is getting ready for Christmas, and man's modern contrivances are taking it on the chin. Reindeer would never be stuck in a snowdrift, no matter how deep. But snowstorms have stranded trains, tied up airplanes and otherwise played hob with transportation and living along the Pacific Coast. No doubt before Santa makes his annual migration, similar inconveniences will be suffered farther eastward.

But King Borealis refuses to be diverted from his task, which is to prepare the terrain for Santa's reindeer. How could those doughty animals make their way southward from the North Pole if snowfall did not precede their course at least part of the way?

Yep, Christmas is so close things are really humming. Stores are jampacked with customers and expect a gradual increase in the pressure until the very walls threaten to give way. They have all but abandoned the advice of old to "do your shopping early." They know somebody will do it, and their shelves will be decimated before Christmas Eve.

At the post office, too, the velocity of Christmas activity is gaining momentum. Preparations have been made to handle many times the normal volume of mail, but that is no reason to expect the impossible in the last few hectic days before Christmas. Mail it now is as good a motto as any that has been suggested for the Yuletide.

Keeping To The Land

How, by beneficent rather than coercive means, to stem the tide of migration of young men from the country to the cities is a problem engrossing the government of Ireland, whose predominant industry is agriculture. Higher wages in the cities have lured 50,000 agricultural workers in the last five years, and it has come to be realized that this exodus could assume truly alarming proportions.

Elder sons, working for "pocket money" because aged farmers will not surrender the land, find themselves unable to marry, and the girls who should be their wives flock to factories and urban amusements.

Perhaps with Scotland in mind, to which soldiers back from the war refused to return because so many Scottish girls were employed in English factories. Prime Minister De Valera and his planners are giving high consideration to decentralizing industries. If such efforts were crowned with success, they would be no less than a second industrial revolution for Ireland. and go a long way toward keeping its economy on an even keel.

Christmas Toys

We ought to give some thought to the selection of Christmas toys and buy only those that are safe and in keeping with the age of the youngster. Many of us are carried away by the Christmas spirit and favor presents with adult appeal. We think children will enjoy them but actually we like these toys ourselves. But it happens every year and accounts for father's disappointment when junior casts aside his new electric train for the old worn out blocks Grandma found in the attic last year.

Children are individuals and never hesitate to call a spade a spade. For them a toy is something to play with and cost never enters the picture. If a measuring cup or tin plate offers more amusement than an expensive gadget the latter will be ignored. This is the way it should be because toys ought to stimulate the imagination and encourage skill and resourcefulness. Furthermore, there is not much we adults can do when Johnny uses his blocks as a noisemaker rather than as a means of building a house or bridge. Toys can be educational as well as stimulating. Some help to develop strength and skill; others encourage constructive and creative play. A few aid social and artistic development, at the same time stimulating knowledge.

Infants are fascinated by the noise and movement of rattles and soft, fluffy balls hung by a cord above the crib so that they can be reached. The 3 to 7 month old baby enjoys wooden beads, empty spools, inflated animals, rattles, and even a piece of cord. Toys that are breakable and have sharp edges must be avoided. Because tots put everything into the mouth, toys ought to be too large to swal-

Because most paints are safe nowadays there is no need to be concerned along this line. The rubber ball usually enters the picture at 9 months and water toys also are amusing. The toddler loves the push and pull gadgets, kiddie cars, hobby horses, blocks, and boxes that open and shut. A sandbox with spoon, shovel, sieve, and pail will be a good invest-

Sex preferences appear about age 2, when boys cast aside dolls and become more mechanically inclined and girls begin to mimic The pre-schooler loves wagons, wheelbarrows, sleds, tricycles, trapeze sets, sewing cards, dolls, and clothespins. The older child gradually makes better use of building blocks, tinker toys, modeling clay, model airplanes, embroidery sets, jigsaw puzzles, and carpenter tools. Requests begin to pour in starting at age 9 to replace the tricycle with a bicycle and for catcher's mitts, base balls, bats, footballs, roller skates, and croquet sets.

Christmas is an exciting time of the year for most of us, more so for the little ones. It is a lucky household that comes through the ordeal without a cranky or sick child. This situation can be offset by maintaining a calm attitude throughout the entire Yuletide and by insisting upon as much rest and sleep as possible. It is well to remember that the small fry will not eat an adequate dinner if they are allowed to consume as much candy and nuts as they want.

Pan American Airways Opposed Chartered Planes For GI Christmas Trips Home; Stevenson Now Admits He Never Could Have Beaten Ike

WASHINGTON-This column receives a great many letters from GI's and gobs in Korea and other areas asking for advice and help regarding various inequities. Many of these get to the root of enlisted men's problems and even affect the general public.

Because of widespread interest, here are the most recent excerpts from the GI mail bag:

Cablegram from 55 members of 322nd Signal Battalion, Darmstadt, Germany - "Pan American Airways forced cancellation of a contract between 55 GIs and Sabena Airlines for a chartered plane to take us home for Christmas. Pan American withheld action until after we had waived our right to government transportation for the month of December, leaving the alternative of paying full prices for commercial transportation or remaining overseas for the second successive Christmas. When we protested, the Panam representative called us 'emotional kids.' We are 55 'emotional kids' who still appreciate spending Christmas with our families.

Answer - Investigation by this column finds that the 55 GIs' cable not only is accurate, but that Pan American Airways also brought that under an International Transport Association regulation they could be fined $50,000. This regulation is actually intended to stop cut-rate competition. Nevertheless, Panam threatened to invoke it to stop the GI Christmas flights. As a result, the other airlines got cold feet and left the GIs stranded in Europe. As far as this column could learn, only one chartered plane ignored the warning and went ahead with its flight.

Apparently, Pan American hoped planes at regular commercial rates. This would amount to from $100 to $250 extra for each GI, depending on how many had got together for a chartered flight.

Though all available military transportation is already booked up for December, the Air Force has promised this column to have "special Mission" planes sent to Europe during December pick up these stranded GIs on the way home. Answer - When the seaplane tender U. S. S. Duxbury Bay last left port, she was supposed to have 18 washbasins and nine showers for 215 enlisted men, as compared with 10 washbasins and six showers for 16 officers. Even if all these facilities are working, this still leaves 12 enlisted men to a washbowl and 26 to a shower, as compared to less than two officers to a washbowl and three to a shower. It looks as if the officers could move over a bit and give the "white hats" more elbow room around the washbowls.

A Service Mother, Denver, Colorado - "My son has served two years with the Marines, 11 months of this in Korea. He was slightly wounded by shrapnel on Heartbreak Ridge. He has less than a year before his enlistment is up. But he has been shipped to Camp Pendleton, California, for assignment back to Korea. Isn't there a regulation against this?"

Answer - Enlisted men under the rank of sergeant are not supposed to be shipped to Korea if they have less than eight months left to serve. Those who haven't even been sent to an embarkation point are supposed to have over a year left before they can be shipped out. However, both the Army and the Marines have been ignoring the regulation and shipping men to Korea despite it. Now that you know the regulation, you can raise the issue with the proper authorities.

A Question

Men do not get jobs in high places without being recommended. Someone opens the door for them. In the case of Americans employed by the United Nations, someone got the jobs for them; someone screened them from the standpoint of security. The reason that Adrian S. Fisher, legal adviser to the State Department, has been called before the federal grand jury in New York and the McCarran Committee is because it was assumed that he, as the law officer of the State Department, could tell how this is done. Also called were John D. Hickerson, assistant secretary of State for UN Affairs, and Carlisle H. Humelsine, deputy under secretary for administration.

The United Nations employs a large staff of all types of administrators, heads of departments, down to janitors and caretakers. Some of these persons come in by examination on a kind of civil service. Others are hired because of their reputations and known skills. They represent many nations and speak of themselves as international officials.

There seems to be a quota system, so many allotted to each country to prevent any one country from having a monopoly. All countries, except the United States, can control their own personnel in the United Nations by simple passport arrangements. In a word, if they do not want a man or woman to be employed by the United Nations, no passport is granted. On the other hand, because the United Nations is situated in New York. no American needs a passport to go to the United Nations. Therefore, this device is available to every member state of the United Nations except the United States.

All Russians, Poles, Ukrainians, and others of the satellite groups who are employed in the United Nations are directly appointed by their own delegations. A few oldtime anti-Communist Czechs remain and that is often used as an exhibit of freedom from control. The State Department, however, maintains that it does not appoint Americans; in fact, it insists that it keeps its hands off such matters. How does it happen that so many in the bigger jobs have formerly been employed in one department or other of the Government of the United States, and some of them, by the State Department? How does it happen that many who were fired from our government as security risks, found their way into the United Nations? Who opened the door for Further, it has been stated to those seeking to discover the facts that if the United Nations requires security information from any government, it is possible to get the facts officially in a very short time, perhaps within a fortnight. The return of requested data from the State Department is always delayed. Why the delay? Who is responsible for the delay?

Even now, after Trygve Lie has dismissed 18 Americans who have demonstrated that they are security risks, the State Department remains nonco-operative with the McCar, ran Committee which has not been witch-hunting in any respect, but has caught the subversive devils red-handed, some of them fearing to testify as to whether they have engaged in espionage lest they incriminate themselves.

The McCarran Committe will continue its investigation after General Eisenhower has become President of the United States. Senator William Langer, who will head the Judiciary Committee, has already announced that this will be the policy of his committee. Senator Homer Ferguson will be in charge of the sub-committee investigating subversion.

Senator Ferguson, having a logical mind, is bound to ask the questions herein outlined. Otherwise, the investigation makes no sense. True, there is some excitement in discovering Americans in the United Nations who will not speak about espionage without fearing that they will incriminate themselves. But that is not enough.

From the standpoint of a legislative committee, what is important is not to "get" anybody, but rather to find the process by which the security of the country is imperilled and to pass legislation plugging up the holes. The attitude of the State Department has thus far been to run interference for the subversives. This question may roll over into Senator Wiley's Committee on Foreign Relations, which supervises the State Department, and Senator McCarthy's Committee on Executive Expendi-

With these committees co-operating to get at the process, the State Department will ultimately be forced to disclose the truth, no matter who is involved and how long it takes.

Matter Of Fact

Money And Politics

Leading Democrats, recovering a little from the heavy blow which they suffered on Nov. 4, are beginning to ask themselves whether this blow was not really a blessing in disguise. One way to understand what they have in mind is to consider the budget message which Harry S. Truman, in his last important act as President, will shortly submit to Congress.

This Truman budget message will leave a sort of ghostly Truman imprint on the Eisenhower regime, since the budget and the policy of any administration are two sides of the same coin. And astute Democrats are rather slyly aware that this Truman budget will be no political asset to the Eisenhower administration.

According to reliable report, Truman will ask much less for defense appropriations than is generally anticipated. For purposes of comparison, Truman in his last budget message asked Congress to appropriate a total of $86 billion, of which about $57 billion was for American defense and mutual aid. Congress a c t u a l l y appropriated about $52 billion for these purposes. Truman and Budget Director Frederick Lawton are now busily paring to the bone the comparable figure for this year's budget message.

Not Good News

There may be last minute changes, but reliable indications are that Truman will ask Congress to appropriate only about $45 billion or so for defense and mutual aid. Other cutbacks are planned elsewhere, even including the Atomic Energy Commission. In short, Truman will ask a whopping $12 billion or so less than he asked last year, and $7 billion less than Congress actually appropriated. At first glance, this may look like good news for the Eisenhower administration. In fact, it is nothing of the sort. As far as appropriations are concerned, even the most ecenomy-minded members of Congress will hardly be able to point to the Truman budget message as evidence of wild extravagance. But the most economyminded members of Congress are by no means necessarily the best judges of the wisest level of defense expenditures.

This matter of the wisdom of the proposed cutbacks is another and vitally important matter. Here it vice president and manager of Dayton Metal Products Co., and Dayton-Wright Airplane Co., later becoming president of the latter company. Both were formed by Charles Kettering of General Motors and Edward Deeds of National Cash Register. In 1917, Deeds was made a col-

is enough to say that President Eisenhower, after a good hard look at some of the skeletons left in President Truman's closet, may very well decide to ask for higher defense appropriations than those requested in Truman's budget message. And the spectacle of a Republican President asking Congress for more money than a Democratic President would not be dis-

pleasing to Democrats. Even if the appropriations requested in the Truman budget message are not increased, the Eisenhower administration will not enjoy the political benefits supposedly inherent in reduced government spending. Indeed, the reverse will be true. For there is, of course, a vital difference between money appropriated by Congress and money actually spent by the government in any one fiscal year.

Comes At Bad Time

This is an esoteric subject. But the heart of the matter is that money appropriated by Congress is largely spent in future years, while current spending is in turn determined by past appropriations, Inflationary pressures are highest when the government is spending more than it is currently getting in taxes. This is therefore the worst possible time to reduce taxes. And Eisenhower is becoming President just as current government expenditures, as distinct from appropriations, are reaching a post-war peak. Current expenditures envisaged in the Truman budget should easily top $80 billion

Sen. Robert A. Taft has called for an immediate cutback in government spending to $70 billion. But budget experts are unanimously convinced that current spending could be so heavily reduced in just one way-by canceling many existing defense contracts and heavily reducing the existing force levels of the services. It is scarcely conceivable that Eisenhower, after his look at the skeleton in the Truman closet, will be willing to take the appalling risk inherent in such a course.

If Truman's requested appropriations are not increased, the time will come, of course, when reduced current spending will permit reduced taxes. But this will be, from a political standpoint, exactly the wrong time. Heavy cutbacks in current defense spending are envisaged for early 1954. These cutbacks will almost certainly cause considerable unemployment - and this on the eve of the 1954 election.

It is thus easy to see why one astute Democrat remarked recently, "If the Republicans had to win, they couldn't have chosen a better time." Yet it should also be said that the kind of leadership which Eisenhower now has an opportunity to offer the nation could very well knock all such sly. money-minded calculations into a

in awhile it is well to consider the past. There is an old-time saying - even if unconfirmed -"History is always repeating itself about every 20 years." Let us look back at the stock market "lows" and "birth rates" of 20 years ago. The only logical reason for the above old saying is that people "mature" at about 20 years of age. Even this reasoning should not be taken serious if the same number of people become 20 years of age every year! For this old theory to work, there must be a differential in the maturity rate. We then can apply this theory as one factor

Statistics show that there has been a great increase in older people, due to various causes. Social Security is reducing worry amongst the aged and certainly they all should thank Francis Townsend of California for this. The new drugs, vitamins, etc. have done much to eliminate disease and lengthen life. What penicillin has done to save the lives of pneumonia patients is a story in itself. Finally, the shorter day and the five-day week have protected the older members of our families. Every manufacturer and shopkeeper is getting more business from older people today than ever be-

It is important that manufacturers and merchants, as well as parents, should keep this in mind. This increase in business will first appear as the birth wave develops needs for new babies; then in needs for the young children; then the demands for the teenagers; then in needs for the older youths; and finally the needs of adults.

Just now, most colleges are operating at a deficit from temporary lack of students, due to the great drop in the birth rate which came 18 to 20 years ago. These colleges, however, should take heart because the crest of another wave of high birth rates will begin to benefit them a few years hence. Not only will more men and women demand an education, but better economic conditions will give more families the money to

we must not forget the returning GI's from Korea. These will be given the same rights to a free college education as were provided to the veterans of World War II. In view of the election of General Eisenhower as our new President, veterans will receive other advantages and compensations, from which many manufacturers and merchants should benefit. Hence, we should watch birth rate figures for both pessimistic and op-

HORSE QUESTIONED - Associated Press reporter Paul Duke takes notes during an interview of Lady Wonder, 27-year-old Richmond, Va., horse credited with having telepathic ability. Lady pecks out her answers to questions on a crude "typewriter" and to date has baffled many experts with her ability to answer any and all questions. Thousands attempt to see and question her every day at the farm of her owner, Mrs. Claudia Fonda.
